

Conservation Management Centre

Part of the School of Management Practice

The Conservation Management Centre (formerly “Green-the-City” project) is part of the School of Management Practice and aims to support an innovative approach to the development of management skills. It will help provide a link between public, voluntary and private sectors and will work in partnership to promote sustainable conservation land management.

The Conservation Management Centre:

-
- Specialises in Ecological Land Management Projects and Training.
 - Manages a network of “Urban Green Sites” as examples of good practice for other agencies, organisations and local communities.
 - Helps develop conservation areas to Local Nature Reserve (LNR) status.
 - Contributes to Local and Regional Environmental / Sustainability Strategies.
 - Develops ongoing partnerships with Local Government, voluntary agencies, private sector and diverse local communities.
 - Provides a consultancy service offering information and advice on conservation management issues and project development.
 - Develops informal learning networks to initiate the sharing of ideas, practice and policy across the various sectors.
- Provides a Coaching/Mentoring service for front-line Environmental Managers.

The Centre has recently gained the Duke of York’s Community Initiative Award, which recognises best practice in Community Enterprise and Leadership.

For more information or to get involved, please contact Centre Manager, Peter Boyd.

Tel 01274 308707 – or come in to see us.

